About Synopsys University Program

Synopsys is committed to providing academic and research institutions with access to the tools and technology needed to develop well-educated students who can meet the difficult challenges of IC and SoC design. Prior to entering the workforce, engineering students receive hands-on experience in the classroom and in graduate-level research programs with Synopsys' industry-leading EDA solutions.

The Synopsys University Program is leading the way in helping developing countries to build knowledge-based, high-tech economies. Synopsys provides a unique educational model that focuses on partnering with local governments and universities to create academic programs that result in highly trained graduates ready for work in local industries.

Partnering with universities since 1986, the Synopsys University Program reaches thousands of students and professors across the globe every year with software installed in more than 1,375 educational institutions worldwide.

* Award ceremony will be held during luncheon on Tuesday March 15
